Ways to Use this Resource

This collection of 100 topics related to classrooms and schools includes ideas about what you can talk to students about--ranging from school programming to policies to leadership to instruction to relationship building. There is, virtually, nothing that we do that shouldn't activate student voice in some way. You'll be surprised at the incredible feedback, insights, opinions, and emotions that you will get when you talk to students about anything in your school as you simply "let your students speak!" no matter what age level they are.

Feel free to download this file, share it with others, or print it up and write on it using the lines that we provide for you on each page.

This guide can be used as a reflection tool, a way to collect student narratives about any topic, or a set of discussion prompts to use with your colleagues in your school or district.

We hope that you will continue the conversation with us about student voice and join the Let Them Speak! Project with us.

Student voice is the #1 form of data which is often, inadvertently, ignored in our schools all over the world. We are honored that you are voice activators, not voice mufflers!
